

Volubill Poaches Billing Vet

GRENOBLE, France -- VoluBill, the leading provider of data services charging software for mobile operators, announced today that Stephen Newton has joined its board as a non-executive director. Newton was previously President, EMEA at Convergys Corporation, where he was in charge of their billing and customer care business. Prior to Convergys, Newton was chief operating officer of Geneva Technology, a billing software company.

"We're delighted to have another industry notable -- and one with such an outstanding track record -- join the VoluBill team," commented VoluBill CEO, Andre Meyer. "Steve will be an asset to both our board and management teams. He will leverage his leadership skills and mobile billing industry expertise to help us pursue more aggressive sales and marketing strategies, and to further increase VoluBill's visibility worldwide."

"This is an exciting time for me to join VoluBill," said Newton. "The company is experiencing excellent market traction, they have developed a best in class data charging solution, vital for operators seeking returns from the launch of new data services. It is a real proposition having live customers deriving tangible value from its operation. I believe the outlook for the company is bright."
